

Yarrowonga Merino & Poll Merino

ON PROPERTY RAM SALE

12TH SEPTEMBER 2016, 1PM

200 RAMS

“CUNNINGHAM PLAINS” HARDEN, NSW

2006-2016 Bloodline Comparison

The Yarrowonga bloodline continues to perform at the top end of the industry. The bloodline comparison shows that Yarrowonga is ranked in the top 2% for profit $/DSE from 77 high and medium accuracy bloodlines.

Inspections are welcome, please contact us to arrange a time.

CONTACT DETAILS

Steve Phillips: 0427 863 128, 02 6386 3128

Ben Patrick: 0428 984 699

Damian Meaburn: 0419 970 009

Email: yarrowongamerino@bigpond.com

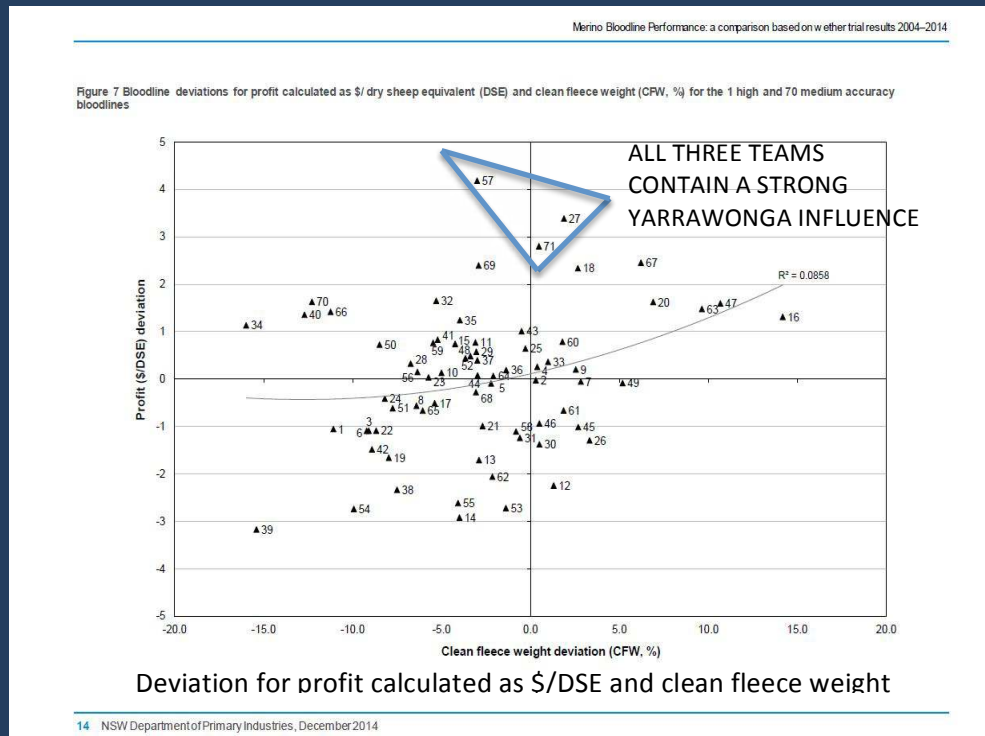

Website: www.yarrowongamerino.com.au

NEW IN 2016

Available for the first time; sons of One Oak 13-10 purchased at the One Oak dispersal for $30,000

One oak 13-10 sons are a very impressive group with tremendous stature; they define capacity whilst still carrying great nourished wools.

YARRAWONGA- THE MONEY MAKING MERINO

ASBV's ARE AVAILABLE ONCE AGAIN VIA OUR WEBSITE OR ON SALE DAY!

www.yarrowongamerino.com.au

the 1990s, the number of people with a mental health problem has increased in the UK. In 1990, there were 1.5 million people with a mental health problem in the UK, and this has risen to 2.5 million in 2005 (Mental Health Foundation, 2006).

There are a number of reasons for this increase. One of the main reasons is that people are living longer. As a result, people are living with mental health problems for longer periods of their lives.

Another reason is that people are becoming more aware of mental health problems. In the past, people with mental health problems were often hidden away in institutions. Now, people are more likely to seek help and support for their mental health problems.

There are also a number of other factors that have contributed to the increase in mental health problems. These include changes in the way that people live, such as the increasing pressure of work and the increasing isolation of people living in urban areas.

It is important to understand the reasons for the increase in mental health problems in order to develop effective strategies for preventing and treating these problems. This paper will explore the reasons for the increase in mental health problems in the UK and will discuss the implications for mental health services.

Introduction

The number of people with a mental health problem in the UK has increased significantly in the past few decades. In 1990, there were 1.5 million people with a mental health problem in the UK, and this has risen to 2.5 million in 2005 (Mental Health Foundation, 2006).

There are a number of reasons for this increase. One of the main reasons is that people are living longer. As a result, people are living with mental health problems for longer periods of their lives.

Another reason is that people are becoming more aware of mental health problems. In the past, people with mental health problems were often hidden away in institutions. Now, people are more likely to seek help and support for their mental health problems.

There are also a number of other factors that have contributed to the increase in mental health problems. These include changes in the way that people live, such as the increasing pressure of work and the increasing isolation of people living in urban areas.

It is important to understand the reasons for the increase in mental health problems in order to develop effective strategies for preventing and treating these problems. This paper will explore the reasons for the increase in mental health problems in the UK and will discuss the implications for mental health services.

Conclusion

The number of people with a mental health problem in the UK has increased significantly in the past few decades. In 1990, there were 1.5 million people with a mental health problem in the UK, and this has risen to 2.5 million in 2005 (Mental Health Foundation, 2006).

There are a number of reasons for this increase. One of the main reasons is that people are living longer. As a result, people are living with mental health problems for longer periods of their lives.

Another reason is that people are becoming more aware of mental health problems. In the past, people with mental health problems were often hidden away in institutions. Now, people are more likely to seek help and support for their mental health problems.

There are also a number of other factors that have contributed to the increase in mental health problems. These include changes in the way that people live, such as the increasing pressure of work and the increasing isolation of people living in urban areas.

It is important to understand the reasons for the increase in mental health problems in order to develop effective strategies for preventing and treating these problems. This paper will explore the reasons for the increase in mental health problems in the UK and will discuss the implications for mental health services.

References

Mental Health Foundation (2006) Mental Health in the UK: A Report for the Government. London: Mental Health Foundation.

Appendix

The following table provides a summary of the reasons for the increase in mental health problems in the UK.

Table 1

Reasons for the increase in mental health problems in the UK